

Declaration of Winter Restoration

Kalapula Nation – Crown Watchpoint 001A, Corvallis, Oregon

It begins with memory.

In the mid-nineteenth century, our people — the Kalapula — were driven from their lodges along the Marys and the Willamette. Forced into encampments near Avery Park, they were left with no walls, no fire, no protection from the cold Oregon rain. Promises made were broken. Our ancestors bore hunger and sorrow in the open air, cast aside in their own homeland.

We do not forget.

We do not allow such cruelty to live again.

Today, in this present year, before the storms of winter return, the Kalapula Nation declares:

We will not stand by while men, women, and children in Corvallis, Linn County, and Benton County suffer houseless on the streets or in cars.

We will not permit families to freeze, nor neighbors to vanish unseen into the rain.

This is not charity. This is restoration.

Each unhoused neighbor is a project of remembrance. We will walk beside them until shelter, warmth, and dignity are restored. This vow does not end with one winter — it is permanent. It begins here and it will spread, as far as memory and compassion can carry it.

 By the Flame of Stewardship entrusted to me,
I, Chief Daniel Jacob Read IV, Sovereign of the Kalapula Nation, establish this:

Declaration of Winter Restoration

We now call for:

- Sleeping bags, blankets, coats, and warm clothing
- Food and non-perishables
- Housing options — temporary or permanent
- Volunteers: drivers, coordinators, collectors, distributors, and storage partners
- Funds and services to sustain this effort beyond a single season

This is our vow: no one in our valley shall be left out in the cold.
